FURNITURE, INTERIOR DECORATION

APRIL 19 - JUNE 22, 1958

THE CORCORAN GALLERY OF ART, WASHINGTON, D. C.

FOREWORD

LIVING TODAY is one of a series of exhibitions presented by The Corcoran Gallery of Art which attempt to survey the impact of modern concepts on the applied arts. It would not have materialized without the very generous assistance and cooperation of the exhibitors listed in the catalogue some of whom have contributed well beyond the dictates of everyday business economics. I should like to extend to them our grateful appreciation.

The installation of the exhibition was facilitated by the generous contributions of a number of firms. The Corcoran Gallery of Art is particularly indebted to: the Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corporation for supplying screening and acoustical tiles; the W. C. and A. N. Miller Company for building the porch and providing Rusco windows; Reinforced Plastics, Inc. for lending Fiberglas panels made by the Alsynite Corporation of America; the A. W. Lee Co. for erecting two acoustical ceilings.

Our thanks also go to the men and women who advised us, particularly to Miss Greta Daniel of the Department of Industrial Design, Museum of Modern Art, New York; Mr. Arthur Drexler, Director of the Department of Architecture of the Museum of Modern Art, New York; Mr. Thomas S. Tibbs, Director of the Museum of Contemporary Crafts, New York; Miss Lois Wagner, Managing Editor of "Interiors"; and Mrs. Alice Korff of the American Institute of Architects.

I should also like to express our gratitude to the Washington collectors who have lent works of art to enhance the exhibition and to Mrs. H. Gates Lloyd, Art Chairman of the Gallery's Women's Committee, and her collaborators who have gathered these. For the greenery we are indebted to the Mount Vernon Ladies Association of the Union and to the National Capital Garden Clubs League.

Several volunteers have participated in the preparation of the exhibition, and we are particularly grateful to Mrs. John R. Slidell, Mrs. Corwin Fleming, Miss Jacqueline Wolfson, Mr. Howard Baylin, and Mrs. Newel Mitchell.

From its conception, the exhibition was planned and organized by Dr. Henri Dorra, Assistant Director of The Corcoran Gallery of Art. The other staff members who participated most actively are Miss Ann Stewart Anderson, Mrs. Victor Lewinson and Mr. Gudmund Vigtel.

INTRODUCTION

The aim of this exhibition was to assemble examples of architecture, furniture and interior decoration most representative of the artistic trends of our times. The objects on display have been selected by members of the Gallery's staff for their esthetic merit, although attention has been paid to their usefulness, and in some cases to their price. The exhibition is national in scope, and the objects have been manufactured, or designed, in this country—in most cases, both.

Rather than show every object by itself, it was thought that a more effective display would be achieved by grouping the items much as they might be gathered in actual use. In addition, and this is a feature unique to this exhibition, works of art of great merit, borrowed from Washington collectors and in the Gallery's own collection, adorn the walls of the rooms.

Two trends stand out in the exhibition. In the first place it is evident that the principle of functionalism is so well established that a number of designers are reacting against its severity by stressing rich textures, violent colors and whimsical shapes that recall the fantasies of the baroque era. In the second place—and this seems to be the most outstanding development since the first flowering of modern architecture and furniture in the twenties—new materials have opened up a whole range of new possibilities which are being intensively explored: bronze and aluminum alloys for the skin of buildings, foam rubber for trimmer and more comfortable seats and beds, Fiberglass and plastics for sturdy and easily molded furniture shells.

One of the conclusions to be drawn from the exhibition is that the blessings of mass production have not always been bestowed upon well-designed objects. Some pieces, must necessarily be individually built by skilled craftsmen. Others would be less expensive if the demand justified the costly tooling required for mass-production. It is the hope of the organizers of this exhibition that a more widespread knowledge of the advantages of well-designed objects will increase the public demand for them.
